

■ HIP DISPLAY

MICHAEL LEA The Whig-Standard

Alexandra Robinson is all concentration as she guides an opto-electronic tracking system onto a human femur in a display of computer-assisted hip surgery set up Tuesday afternoon by the Queen's University School of Computing during a university open house inside Grant Hall. The tool allows surgeons to precisely locate the entry point for replacement parts during hip surgery.